The Marine Mammal Center advances ocean health through marine mammal rescue and rehabilitation, research, and education.

Stewardship Saturday: Experiencing Fish Kitchen

Thank you for joining us at The Marine Mammal Center's recent Fish Kitchen Stewardship Saturday event.

The Marine Mammal Center uses the "What, So What, Now What" framework to link its efforts to broader issues of ocean health and climate change. We've applied this framework to reflect on and highlight key takeaways from our recent event.

What?

What does it take to care for marine mammal patients during pup season at The Marine Mammal Center?

So What?

Through this event at the Center, we gained insight into the vital efforts behind caring for marine mammal patients during pup season. With patients consuming up to 1,000 pounds of fish per day, volunteers are essential in preparing food and maintaining a clean, safe environment. We also learned how these animals impact the ecosystem and saw firsthand the dedication volunteers bring to their rehabilitation.

Now What?

You can help contribute to the Center's mission by volunteering, spreading awareness about ocean conservation, or making changes in your daily life to protect marine ecosystems. Whether it's signing up to volunteer, learning more about sustainable seafood choices, or advocating for ocean and environmental policies, your actions help ensure a healthier future for marine mammals and the planet.

During this event, the following next-step ideas were shared, and we've provided resources to help you explore these topics in more depth.
